Pennsylvania's Medicaid programs have continued to move into managed care, including for home and community-based services. The approach and timing of any systems changes in the intellectual/developmental disability services is unknown at this time.

Each organization will need to consider the potential impact and its capacity and readiness to thrive under any changes to how the system pays for, integrates, coordinates, or manages services. Of paramount importance is understanding the potential impact on the individuals you serve. Other key areas to consider are quality management and alignment with identified program priorities.

In a two to three month period, our IDD/HCBS Managed Care Readiness Project is designed to:

- Inform your organization about managed care principles, priorities, processes, requirements, and terminology, including national trends and program models, in contrast with the current fee-for-service, any willing provider environment under which you currently operate your programs.
- Analyze your organization's understanding, capacity and readiness to be best positioned to contract with managed care plans and deliver services in a managed care environment.
- Identify your organization's unique opportunities for successfully participating in a changing service delivery-system.

Phase 1: Managed Care 101 education on site, customized for your agency to orient your staff to potential changes ahead and provide an overview of the new shape of service delivery which could impact your business.

Phase 2: Conduct a Capacity and Needs Assessment – evaluating your plans, objectives, programs, IT, HR, board support, quality, regional resources, organizational structure, and the competitive landscape.

Phase 3: Management Presentation of Findings to leave you with a laser-focused image of your preparedness for operating under any managed care model to help you choose your best path forward.
