

Impacts and Opportunities for Residential Treatment Services – Join the Office Hours Series

NATIONAL COUNCIL FOR BEHAVIORAL HEALTH

NEW National Council Office Hours: Join the Discussion; Leave with Solutions

Residential treatment facilities and providers are facing unique challenges while navigating the surge in care demands throughout the COVID-19 pandemic. While this service is critical to patients in need, residential treatment facilities and providers are juggling treatment for behavioral health and substance use disorders, staffing shortages due to outbreaks and a lack or shortage of personal protective equipment (PPE).

In order to provide care while ensuring the health and safety of their residents and staff, behavioral health residential facilities need more support and resources to effectively serve those in need.

We want to hear from you. We want to know how you're responding to COVID-19 at your organizations and how can we support you.

Join our next COVID-19 Office Hours Session
Impacts and Opportunities for Residential Treatment Services
Thursday, April 16, 3–4 pm ET

We'll discuss the strengths, challenges and opportunities for equipping residential treatment staff to safely and effectively care for residents during the COVID-19 response. We invite you to join the conversation and share your innovative approaches to care at this time:

- How are you navigating the emerging challenges within residential treatment facilities during the pandemic, like PPE, staffing and quarantine?
- What strategies are you using to safely care for residents and staff?

- How can we advocate or support you and residential treatment staff to safely and effectively respond to the COVID-19 pandemic?
