American Industrial Hygiene Association® offers Guidance on Going Back to Work

Across a wide range of industries, everyone is asking the same question: How does my organization get back to work safely? New guides from the American Industrial Hygiene Association (AIHA) offer some help. AIHA® is one of the largest international associations serving the needs of industrial/occupational hygiene professionals practicing in industry, government, labor, academic institutions, and independent organizations. For more information, visit www.AIHA.org.

AIHA's Back to Work Safely website features eight guides focused on specific environments—including at home services, transportation, and general office settings—that provide detailed guidance on how to get back to work. Before returning to work, organizations should craft a plan. Plans will vary depending on the environment. The CDC offers recommendations for businesses and workplaces.
