WHEREAS, mental health advocacy is crucial to raising public awareness, breaking down stigma and discrimination, encouraging self-advocacy, delivering timely and quality mental health services, and supporting people with mental health conditions; and

WHEREAS, early identification, intervention, and treatment of mental health conditions can improve—and even save—lives, and it is important to learn the signs and symptoms of these conditions in order to seek and receive help when it is needed; and

WHEREAS, we recognize the significant role that the dedicated network of advocates, professionals, state leaders and agencies, local governments, and community providers play in the delivery of services and support for individuals, their families, and our communities; and

WHEREAS, this month-long observation puts conversations surrounding mental health at the forefront, and has been a catalyst for setting the groundwork for a state-wide network of assistance programs, safe-spaces, and resources; and

WHEREAS, we strive to create communities in our Commonwealth that support mental wellness by increasing access to treatment, educating ourselves and our communities about the effects of trauma, mental well-being, and mental health challenges, and supporting our fellow Pennsylvanians as they seek to improve their mental health; and

WHEREAS, the commitment to prioritizing and championing mental health is a commitment to creating healthier and stronger communities where all Pennsylvanians can thrive.

THEREFORE, I, Josh Shapiro, Governor of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, do hereby proclaim the month of May 2025 to be

MENTAL HEALTH AWARENESS MONTH

I encourage Pennsylvanians to join with their families, government agencies, public and private institutions, businesses, schools, and communities to share their stories, increase awareness and understanding of mental health, and to recognize the necessity of accessible, appropriate, and affordable mental health resources, services, and support for all Pennsylvanians.
