September 17, 2025

Dear Members of the Pennsylvania Congressional Delegation:

We, the undersigned organizations, urge Congress to move quickly to pass legislation extending the Enhanced Premium Tax Credits (EPTCs) that make marketplace plans more affordable for people who purchase their own health insurance, which expire at the end of 2025.

In 2025, Pennie, Pennsylvania's health insurance marketplace, saw record-breaking enrollment of 496,661 thanks to these tax credits. During a time when Pennsylvanians are already struggling with the high cost of living, the EPTCs have been transformational, saving Pennsylvanians $600 million in total and cutting monthly premium costs nearly in half for individuals and families who purchase Pennie plans. The high levels of enrollment encouraged by EPTCs also ensure a robust, healthy health insurance marketplace.

These savings have been particularly important for low- and middle-income individuals, older Pennsylvanians, small business owners, residents of rural communities, older adults close to retirement age, and workers who are not offered insurance by their employers. These workers include: servers at restaurants; preschool teachers; small-business owners and workers; retail workers; students; and many others.

Without EPTCs, 90% of Pennsylvanians who purchase a Pennie plan would see sharp increases to their monthly premiums. Premiums would go up by an average of 82%, with many Pennsylvania families paying double, triple, or even quadruple what they're currently paying per month. For example, a married 60 year old couple in York County with an annual income of $82,000 are expected to see prices go from $586/month to $2,976/month if EPTCs are not extended. For many, these premium increases will force them to make serious financial sacrifices in other areas, switch to a plan with less comprehensive coverage, or go uninsured altogether.

If EPTCs are not extended, an estimated 270,000 Pennsylvanians are likely to become uninsured. When more people become uninsured, Pennsylvania taxpayers pay for their care one way or another because uninsured people are often forced to delay or avoid care for treatable conditions. They ultimately end up sicker, requiring more expensive care in hospitals, and leading to higher uncompensated care costs for hospitals and providers. They also acquire medical debt and experience health complications that can jeopardize their employment or employability.

We, the following 95 organizations, urge you to extend the Enhanced Premium Tax Credits in order to keep health insurance costs affordable for hardworking Pennsylvania families, support small businesses and employers, ensure hospitals and providers are compensated, and keep health insurance markets robust.
